Place to be, bar none

McGreevy's was the hang-out joint for bands on a rare two-day break from the Vans Warped Tour earlier this week. Tom Gabel, James Bowman, Andrew Seward, and Warren Oakes of Against Me, Jim Lindberg and Fletcher Dragge of Pennywise, and Brian Dixon and Jesse Wagner of the Aggrolites joined former Bruin P.J. Stock in tossing back a few cold ones and playing punk rock tunes on the jukebox at the baseball bar owned by Ken Casey of the Dropkick Murphys. (The Murphys are touring in Mexico, and couldn't join their pals.) "It feels like home to them because it's their friend's bar," said spokeswoman Farah Casis. The bands, including Angels & Airwaves, did get some fan love, but the whole scene was very chill, she said.
